A patented device prevents its being turned backwards;

The needle cannot be set wrong;

Can be used successfully without other instructions than accompany the Machine;

Some Facts about Captain Wirtz—His Early History.

[Correspondence of the New York Times.]

VICKSBURG (Miss.), September 25.—The trial of this criminal is exciting some comment here. It remained for Vicksburg to produce his eulogist. The State that is now petitioning and importuning for the pardon of Jeff. Davis contains within its borders many apologists for the horrors enacted at Andersonville.

A recent morning journal contained a lengthy letter from a returned rebel soldier who professed to know Wirtz intimately, and claimed for him the character of an "affable, courteous gentleman." This, of course, brought withering rebukes from a dozen sources, where affability and courtesy of the Andersonville school were unappreciated. Even the editor of the paper saw the necessity for apologizing to his readers for the insult conveyed by permitting "Justitia," Wirtz's unknown friend—to vent his spleen in public print.

The public are comparatively unaware of the record of the prisoner during the early stage of the rebellion, and are unfamiliar with the gradual steps by which he became the most revolting character produced by the war.

He was on duty as clerk of the prisons in Richmond as early as July, 1861, about which time he was detailed for clerical labor, under the celebrated Captain Todd, who became famous, or infamous for brutality to defenceless Union soldiers and citizens under his charge. This man Todd was the first to inaugurate the practice of shooting or murdering prisoners for approaching windows or "dead lines," which novel practice was so widely incorporated in the discipline of rebel prisons as to become a distinctive feature of the "civilized warfare" which Jeff. Davis professed to wage.

Captain Todd, himself a tyrant, at this remote period, had discovered in Sergeant Wirtz those elements of brutality, servility and bestiality which have since made him the despised of mankind.

The writer of this article was an inmate of the prison prior to the establishment of Libby, and remembers that the clerk never entered the building unaccompanied by a guard of Confederate soldiers, well armed, with guns loaded and capped. He was a petty tyrant, treating when he ... upon the slightest pretense, where his authority to do so was unquestioned; but groveling and craven when threatened that complaint would be made against him to Captain Gibbs—Todd's successor—a kind hearted man. In order to retain his detail, and to avoid being ordered to duty with his regiment, Wirtz never hesitated at any act of meanness; and, though only a non-commissioned officer, was, even then, conspicuous for restricting the privileges of prisoners of war.

Wirtz remained in Richmond as clerk and keeper of the prison rolls, attracting but little attention from any one outside the jail boundaries until November, 1862, when he was sent to a newly established prison (located, I think, in Tuscaloosa, Alabama), in charge of two hundred and fifty Union soldiers en route from Richmond.

The appearance of the Sergeant, at that time, while his victims were drawn up in line on the main street fronting the jail, preparatory to shipment, was so remarkable as to make a most forcible impression upon all those who saw him. His gaunt form, never erect, but in a semi-crouching attitude, was clad in ... the variegated skin of the tiger. His mongrel rebel uniform, consisting of gray jacket and light pants, was striped with red and black. He was armed to the teeth, ... up and down the long line of prisoners, counting and recounting them with an excited manner, cursing and moving about in a wild, ferocious motion, only comparable with the excitement of the tiger ... with its helpless prey. For the first time in his life the embryo monster had a "compound;" he was intoxicated with joy at the near prospect of there being no one to restrain his passion for cruelty. His ... on this ... cal and fiendish ... in words.

A gentleman well known to the writer was recently in Washington with the intention of submitting his evidence against the jailor, having personal ... his cruelty; but, when he saw his ex-jailor's terrified looks, his utter abjectness, contempt usurped the place of revenge, and he ... which ... ated his departure from the city and relieved him of the further disgust of again witnessing such a spectacle of degraded humanity.

Ten million lives of such men could not satisfy the country for the wrongs ... by this fiend. There were others standing behind Wirtz for whose favor he fawned and for whose approving smile he turned to look while worrying and hounding the almost fleshless bodies in his ... tery at Andersonville. He was the dog whose owner is yet to be discovered and held responsible for his deeds. He who set the dogs upon our brothers and sons to worry them to death, is yet unpunished. At his frown the ... now chained in Washington, ... and shrunk in abject terror; at his order, Henry Wirtz would have become a ghoul.

TRIAL OF ETHERIDGE.—A Cairo (Ill.) ... of October 14th, says:

The Court for the trial of Emerson Etheridge is now in session at Columbus, Ky. Etheridge stated he had no objection to any member of the Court, and wished to act as his own counsel. He asked the Court to grant him time to file his own plea against jurisdiction, etc.

On the second day of the trial of Emerson Etheridge, the accused, who had been permitted to plead his own case, read a plea denying the jurisdiction of the Commission, which the Court overruled, upon which Etheridge filed an exception to the ruling. He then pleaded not guilty to all the charges and specifications, except the second specification and second charge, to which he pleaded guilty, and the Court allowed him to introduce the whole letter from which the extract was made. This letter is known as the "Dresden letter," dated June 26th, in which he made the declaration that Tennessee had no law but force, and no semblance to civil government, State or Federal, but a usurpation enforced by the bayonets of negroes. After some evidence for the prosecution the accused presented the Court with a written statement, which admits all the facts in the first charge, namely, the "encouragement of resistance to the enforcement of the laws."

CAIRO AND ST. LOUIS RAILROAD.—We clip the following paragraph from the Cairo Times of the 24th of September:

It is a well established fact, conceded by all steamboatmen, that no section of the Mississippi is so difficult to navigate in low water, or in the winter season, as that stretching between this city and St. Louis, thus peremptorily demanding the speedy construction of the Cairo and St. Louis Railroad. Nor is this all. The railroad companies east of St. Louis are so desirous that such road be built, that if Cairo and the people on the line of the proposed road do not construct it they will. But the people of this city, and those living in the country through which the Cairo and St. Louis Railroad is proposed to run, are not only desirous that it should be built, but have evinced their determination that it shall be built, and their ability to build it. It is now being, or has been surveyed, and but little remains to be done ere the work will be commenced.

POTATOES.—The potato is tenacious of life, exceedingly productive, and will reproduce itself under the most adverse circumstances. Under some conditions it will bear tubers on the branches above ground. If it is not planted in the soil, but allowed to lie in the cellar, without roots or leaves it will make an effort for a crop, and often from its own body give two or even three small potatoes. These of course, live on the parent tuber, and sometimes exceed it in weight. Cut the eyes out, and still sprouts will issue from the holes made in the potato. A case is mentioned where potatoes were planted, but not coming up it was determined to put in turnips, and on examining the hills it was found that in several cases, though no signs of tops were apparent, there were the usual underground branches, and tubers of the size of butternuts.

HORSE WISDOM.—Anything that the horse can touch with his nose without being harmed he does not fear. Therefore the hand, the halter, girth, blanket, saddle, harness, umbrella, buffalo robe, whatever is brought in proximity with him, should be introduced to and touched by that sensitive organ. A knowledge of this important fact is the main secret of Rarey's success in horse taming.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE

TUESDAY MORNING NOVEMBER 21, 1865.

The People's Transportation Company's Improvements at Oregon City

In looking over the works of this company at Oregon City the other day we were struck with surprise at the large amount of labor accomplished within so short a time as three and a half months. The excellence of the improvements also excited our admiration. And as there is some misapprehension in regard to the design and extent of the undertaking, we have thought it well to give the enterprise this notice.

We were shown over the work by Capt. Kellogg, the energetic superintendent, under whose management and supervision the basin and dam have been constructed. His explanations of the various details, together with an inspection of the maps and plans at the office of Col. Belden, the company's engineer, enable us to give a correct idea of the works.

The basin and dam were commenced on the 15th of August and completed for the admission of steamboats on the 15th of November. The dam enclosing the basin is of fourteen inch timber frames, placed six feet apart from center to center, securely bedded in and fastened to the solid rock by three 1¼ bolts through each sill. These frames are inclined on the side next the basin at an angle of forty five degrees, and have a base equal to their height. They are covered with three inch plank, well spiked, making a thoroughly water tight dam of as great strength as any timber work can be. The length of the dam built in this way is about 1,000 feet. The amount of square timber used is 150,000 feet, board measure and the planking about 45,000 feet more. The iron used in bolting it is fully three tons. About 1,000 perches of cement masonry are also built to render the foundation still more secure. The average height of the dam is twelve feet, sustaining a height of water of about seven feet when the river is at an ordinary stage. The depth of water in the basin is from six to eight feet over a space about 500 feet long by 300 wide. In the basin we have already seen four of the company's steamers lying at one time. The top of the dam is two feet lower than the extreme high water of 1861-62, and plank frames are designed to raise it some three feet higher, as occasion may require. These frames may be placed in position or removed within an hour, when the rise or fall of the river may render either necessary. For some hundreds of feet above the basin, timbers are securely bolted to the rock and answer the purpose of a tumbling dam or waste-weir. At the low stage of the river in the fall, the dam sets back the water nearly level with the low water surface of the river at Canemah above the falls, and the upper river boats then have no difficulty in passing either way, to and from Oregon City. Above the basin a channel some three hundred feet long by sixty feet wide, has been deepened three to five feet in the solid rock. At this place a guard lock is to be built next summer. A side dam connecting with the basin below is also to be constructed next year—it having been found impossible to finish the whole work in the short time that has elapsed since the company purchased the property at the falls.

Everything so far has fully equaled the expectations of the designers of the enterprise. It is thought best to have the experience of the winter's high water before deciding upon the exact dimensions of the work to be done next season.

A series of locks is also contemplated, designs and estimates for which have been made by Col. Belden, the engineer. These locks are intended to connect the basin with the lower river. It is designed in this way to pass boats of 170 feet in length. The locks are to be forty feet wide and are to have at least six feet water over the mitre sill, with eight feet lift to each of three locks—the fourth having something more at the lower stages of water. These locks may not be constructed immediately; but gentlemen connected with the company say that the work will be done whenever the business of the Willamette river may demand it.

Besides the basin and the dam a large and most substantial warehouse is now nearly completed, with an inclined railway leading to a wharf on the lower river. Freight will be passed over from boat to boat, and a transfer of passengers made, in ten minutes' time.

Everything pertaining to the work has been done in the most thorough manner. Nothing has been neglected in offering the most excellent facilities for freighters or passengers. The work is a benefit to the whole community of the valley, as it enables the company to reduce their rates by nearly the sum formerly required for freight and passage from Oregon City to Canemah.

The development of the water power is almost as important as the improvement of the facilities for transportation. The company have some admirably located mill seats around the basin and along the bank of the river, of great value. Good judges have said that the company has a property of more value in these mill sites than the whole amount of purchase money and expenditures in making the improvements.

Oregon City has felt and will continue to feel the benefit of the energy of the company in this undertaking. We take pleasure in recording the successful prosecution and completion of a great work like the one herein imperfectly described. Such enterprises speak well for the present growth and future prosperity of the State.

THE MAIL TO BUTTEVILLE.—There seems to be much irregularity in the management of the mail that goes, or should go to Butteville. We have information that the people there sometimes do not get a mail for two or three weeks together. The mail should go once a week from Oregon City to Butteville. There is no excuse for failure to do so. The OREGONIAN for that place frequently fails to reach its destination when it should. It ought to go to Butteville on Monday of each week. The fault rests somewhere, and we shall take pains to investigate the matter and let the Butteville people know who is to blame.

Speaking of the Fenians, the London Times says: "There is true mercy in putting down sedition at an early stage." What! Can the Times be forgetful of its terrible denunciations of our Government but a little while ago, when we undertook to "put down sedition?" John Bull's non resistant theory works charmingly when he is giving advice to others, but when dangers of an insurrection threaten himself, he takes measures about as decisive as those Napoleon once adopted to quell sedition in Paris.

HAVE JOINED HANDS.—The State Rights Democrat hastens to extend the hand of party fellowship to the Oregon Statesman. The former comes at once to the defense of the latter, and tells us that "the Statesman is the recognized organ of the conservatives." In other words, it is the organ of those who propose if possible, to divide the Union party and affiliate with Copperheads. The promptness of the Democrat in taking the part of the Statesman is not at all a matter of surprise to any one. The Statesman's position is becoming well understood. Will Union men anywhere be seduced from their duty by its machinations?

The Confederate Democrat is terribly exercised about the proposed Registry Law. It has "leaders" against the law every week. The Democrat fears that the proposed enactment will disfranchise those excellent and zealous citizens, who served in the rebel armies. There's its difficulty.

Letter from Lewiston

FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

LEWISTON, Nov 11th 1865.

In my last I promised to give you something more of the quartz of Idaho county.

Before touching upon other leads I will state that from information received the past week I learn that the Florence Company, on the Saddle & Harper lead have recently struck ore of extraordinary richness in which, [illegible] it is extracted from the vein, native silver is readily seen in layers like those of thin paper which are both ductile and malleable. One ton of their ore is now in transit for [illegible] to be crushed and tested. This sample is not from the rich portion of the vein recently opened. Your [illegible] men will have an opportunity to see the ore when it arrives.

[illegible] from the Lowest lead has not been tested nor have any of the Companies located on it as yet sunk upon the vein sufficiently to have a fair test made.

[illegible] from the Hunt lead has been tested [illegible] and pronounced by some as good [illegible] have never yet seen any [illegible] all gold. The Company are now sinking upon the vein, and I received a [illegible] to day which gives [illegible] encouragement to their work. The vein is full three feet wide, and at their present depth yields ore of apparently good quality. Upon the lead about eighteen claims have been taken, also about the same number upon the Lone Star. Recent prospecting has induced the belief in some men that the Saddle & Harper, the Lone Star and Hunt leads are but the continuation of one lead. But from observations made prior to leaving Florence, I do not think this belief well founded.

The North Idaho is situated on the south side of Salmon river, and near the trail leading from Meadow Creek to Harris diggings. The vein is several feet in width and contains several varieties of rock. Several prospectors upon this vein have made selections of rock, supposing it to contain the silver, which upon a test has been found not to contain even the slightest trace of the metal. Other selections have been made and brought to this place and assayed proving to be rich, yielding as high as $1,100 to the ton. These counter results of tests of the rock from this vein have inspired a doubt as to the true location from which the rich ore was taken. But the credibility of the men who obtained it and their well established characters leaves but little room to doubt their assertions. I have never visited any opening made upon the vein, and I therefore am not prepared to fully affirm that the rock is rich, but I have strong confidence in the statements of the men who have brought rock to me which they declared they extracted from said vein and which I know to be very rich ore.

There are about forty claims located upon this vein and held by companies of from three to eight men each. No one of these companies has yet organized for the purpose of working the vein to any extent this winter.

The Red lead is situated not far from the French Creek ferry on Salmon river, and contains gold, with no trace of silver. The lead is about fifteen feet in width. The ore is red, and bears somewhat the appearance of red chalk. It has been assayed and found to contain about $30 per ton of ore, in gold. The size of the vein and the facility with which it can be worked induces the belief that it will be a valuable lead.

The number of locations made upon this lead we know not, but have been informed that about twenty five claims have been taken. No work of consequence has yet been performed upon this vein.

The Mammoth lead is situated several miles above the mouth of Meadow Creek, and is supposed to contain both silver and gold. Several claims have been located upon it, and the vein is reported to be about fifty feet in width. I have made as yet no test of the rock.

The Pioneer lead is situated in the Florence Basin and is gold bearing. The vein is from three to six inches in width at the depth of ten feet from the surface, and the rock containing in places very fine gold. It is very white with here and there clusters of black sulphurets. No work will be done on this vein the coming winter. Several other veins of minor importance have been discovered, all gold bearing but small as they exhibit themselves near the surface.

The success in quartz prospecting which has attended the feeble efforts of the past season, will give some life and vigor to the prospectors the next year, and from the low quality of the gold of Florence and Warren, together with other indications noticeable to the careful observer, I shall not be at all surprised to learn of silver leads being discovered in that region during the next year which will rival the celebrated Comstock lead of Nevada. But of quartz your readers must be filled to satiety.

Bacon, of the Montana Express, has returned to this place, having proceeded on the Lo Lo fork trail to within about forty miles of Fort Owens, where he became lost, in consequence of the thick, smoky weather, and was obliged to take his back track. He had no feed for his animals, and traveled five days without food for himself. The trail was unknown to him and he was not aware of his near approach to Fort Owens, otherwise he would have pushed through. He will start again soon, and go by the Coeur d'Alene.

Mr. Florence, expressman, just arrived, reports no snow at Florence when he left, and none upon the trail out. The mountains between Florence and Warren's were covered with snow to the depth of a foot. Trains were packing in winter supplies for the miners.

The Oro Fino express arrived last night, and reports things in good condition in that camp. Reports of quartz discoveries have been recently current there, though a mysterious secrecy seemed to prevail among the discoverers.

Lewiston now shows some life, especially in and about its saloons and dance houses. The merchants have done a good business here since the Palouse, Coeur d'Alene and Blackfoot emigration commenced and packers have enjoyed a good harvest. The demand for goods in the direction of Blackfoot, has delayed the trains from taking the usual amount of supplies to the other camps tributary to this place, and should the winter commence early and severely some of the latter camps will have to live on short rations before spring. Freight wagons are doing a good business between this place and Wallula. Blackfoot has reduced the usual number of miners working on the bars of Snake and Salmon rivers during the winter months, hence Lewiston will find her winter trade lessened from this source.

Our farmers and ranchmen in this section have taken considerable courage from the intimation given by Senator Nesmith when here that the Senate would ratify our treaty with the Nez Perces the coming winter. These hopes, though long delayed may yet be realized.

Yours,
LELAND.

AN OVERPLUS OF FRUIT.—The scarcity of fruit which was known in Oregon a few years ago, is now succeeded by an over abundance of the article. Thousands of bushels of the finest varieties of apples are still lying in our orchards and will never be gathered in. In the upper portion of the valley but little attention is paid to boxing and shipping fruit. A correspondent near Butteville, Marion country, says that it will not pay to ship apples from above the falls. This correspondent informs us that a fruit grower in his vicinity has 10,000 bushels of apples lying in his orchard which will rot there. This orchardist will cut down two thirds of his trees and use his lands for other purposes. We regret that our apple crop is not turned to a better account. A large share of the fruit should be dried, as in this way it would readily find a market at remunerative prices.

GENERAL BANKS ON NEGRO SUFFRAGE.—As this gentleman has been elected to Congress from Massachusetts the following letter will prove interesting, as indicating his course on a subject that will be much talked of in and out of Congress:

BOSTON, Oct 9, 1865.—Sir: In answer to inquiries presented to me, I have the honor to say I am in favor of granting the right of suffrage to colored men. I believe this measure to be necessary to the settlement of the affairs of this country, and have full confidence that it will be adopted. I urged this upon the Constitutional Convention of Louisiana in 1864, [illegible] at New Orleans the [illegible] of this year, which I inclose. You will find a full expression of my sentiments.
N. P. BANKS.

THE OATH.—The test oath [illegible] adopted by Congress in July 1862 and which is [illegible] the [illegible] Congressmen from the Southern States is as follows:

"I do solemnly swear that I have never voluntarily borne arms against the United States since I have been a citizen thereof; that I have voluntarily given no aid, countenance, counsel or encouragement to persons engaged in armed hostility thereto; that I have neither sought nor accepted, nor attempted to exercise the functions of any office whatever under any authority or pretended authority in hostility to the United States; that I have not yielded a voluntary support to any pretended government, authority, power or constitution within the United States, hostile or inimical thereto. And I do further swear that, to the best of my knowledge and ability, I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States," etc.

The London Times makes the following not very creditable admission, when it says "drinking has become interwoven with the very life and soul of every English occasion of importance that the idea of closing grog shops on election day is simply inadmissible."

THE ALABAMA ORDINANCES.—In the Alabama Convention on the 28th of September an ordinance was adopted repudiating the debt which the State had contracted in aid of the rebellion and forbidding it ever to be paid. The ordinance is as follows:

Be it ordained, etc., That all debts created by the State of Alabama in aid of the late war, directly or indirectly, are hereby declared void, and the General Assembly of the State shall have no authority and they are hereby forbidden to ratify the same, or to assume, or provide for the payment of the same or any part thereof.

And be it further ordained, That the General Assembly of the State shall have no authority, and they are hereby forbidden to assume or make any provision for the payment of any portion of the debt contracted or incurred directly or indirectly by the Confederate States or by its agents or by its authority.

The foregoing was adopted by a vote of 60 to 18. A debt of about $14,000,000 was thus settled without the slightest trouble [illegible]. The State debt created prior to the rebellion was acknowledged by the Convention and the Government [illegible] to borrow money to pay interest upon it.

The ordinance relating to the freedmen is as follows. It was adopted with a dissenting voice:

Be it ordained by the people of the State of Alabama, in convention assembled, That the civil officers now and heretofore acting as the agents of the Freedmen's Bureau in this State, under the proclamation of the Provisional Governor, be and the same are hereby required to continue to discharge the duties therein under the rules and regulations heretofore prescribed, until the adjournment of the next session of the General Assembly.

Under this regulation it is said that negro testimony is practically admitted in all cases where the rights of the freedmen are involved, whether the controversies to be settled arise between the blacks themselves or between the blacks and whites.

A resolution was introduced in the Convention asking the President to release Jeff Davis. It went to a committee and never saw the light again.

On the whole, Alabama seems to have done the work preparatory to her readmission, somewhat more thoroughly than most of the other States. It is noticeable, too, that fewer difficulties have sprung up between the people of that State and the Federal authorities, and between white and black citizens than have occurred elsewhere. The great raids of Rousseau and Wilson taught the Alabamians to desire peace. It is greatly to be wished that the whole people of the South could be made to understand that there is no way to pardon and reconciliation except by absolute submission.

Nuisance. The [illegible] present [illegible] to the crossings is a perfect nuisance. It [illegible] for a person to cross from one block to [illegible] this kind of pavement [illegible] from two to [illegible] The pavement for that matter is a perfect [illegible] getting so it is unbearable [illegible] of the crossings so that pedestrians may [illegible] from the curb without splashing [illegible] on both sides of the street. [illegible] Tyrhoon.—The wind of Sunday evening [illegible] pranks in this city. Signs, awnings [illegible] etc., felt its effects, about the [illegible] service. An old shell back, who is now [illegible] land lubber, describes the gale as being [illegible] He asserts that it literally extinguished [illegible] in the latitude of Fourth and Washington [illegible] near taking his top gallant sail, but it [illegible] securely stayed with preventer braces [illegible] reef and was about to [illegible] [illegible] other crafts hove in sight, bearing [illegible] top-mast split and sail carried away, and [illegible] badly flurried, causing considerable agitation [illegible] was of short duration, but being [illegible] was unable to "speak" the floating [illegible]

[illegible] Irwin.—Jimmy Irwin, formerly [illegible] the Theater in this city, but of late a volunteer [illegible] First Oregon Infantry, jumped overboard [illegible] at Umatilla, on the evening of [illegible] drowned. He was intoxicated at the [illegible] at the landing a few minutes before he [illegible] to go on shore, but was refused [illegible] he would go, if he had to jump overboard [illegible] The boat was passing from the upper [illegible] when he jumped into the river. [illegible]—This machine has closed operations [illegible] the [illegible] of 1865. Our shippers by [illegible] their bills of lading for the season can see [illegible] of good the dredger has accomplished [illegible] every ship and every steam ship arriving [illegible] of Sept., Oct. and Nov. have been [illegible] at great expense. This year [illegible] been lightered, and [illegible] and but one on the outward voyage, at a [illegible] more than $2,200. The expense of the dredge [illegible] but a fraction above that sum, and the [illegible] is about obliterated. [illegible] to remove it entirely.

[illegible] Found.—A fine looking boy, apparently [illegible] days old, was found on Saturday night at Mr. [illegible] Landis & Richie's steam saw mill [illegible] of this city. It was left [illegible] a piece of a blanket, with other clothing [illegible] Having been expelled from its [illegible] conjecture [illegible] cared for by the family, and may possibly [illegible] of its marvelous [illegible] keep on in this way the establishment [illegible] hospital will next be [illegible]

The Albany Steam Mills. This splendid flouring mill, owned by Messrs. [illegible] and Thomas Monteith, is now nearly [illegible] complete [illegible] and the [illegible] will be ready in a few [illegible] [illegible] which [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the public [illegible] [illegible] twenty [illegible] building, [illegible] forty [illegible] feet in length [illegible] width. The Idaho Road.—Last Monday morning we received a visit from Mr. H. [illegible] Brown [illegible] who with Mr. [illegible] town made the complete journey from here to Canyon City and back with an [illegible] wagon and team [illegible] the new road [illegible] the advantage by way of Lebanon. They travelled leisurely [illegible] but were only ten days in making the journey to Canyon City. They found the road in fine condition generally and [illegible] but one or two troublesome places the whole distance [illegible] however which occasioned them any delay [illegible] On the return trip they came all the way here in eight days with ease. A slight fall of snow [illegible] near Wall [illegible] was the only thing which at all impeded their progress [illegible] miles the road was [illegible] dusty, but this cannot neither themselves [illegible] their team any trouble, as plenty of good water was readily found all the way. Mr. Bright says that he never travelled a better road for water, grass and good shelter for stock, and these [illegible] are to be had in great plenty at convenient camping grounds. There are no Indians along the road [illegible] may [illegible] of attacks from any. Capt. [illegible] with his forty soldiers are camped on Squaw creek in comfortable new buildings for the winter, and the presence of this force will insure [illegible] from Indian incursions on the road.—[illegible] Democrat.

Better Times Ahead.—For two or three months there has been an increasing demand for houses and building would have been going on briskly had it not been for the fact that lumber could not be obtained. This want, however, will soon be supplied. The engine mill is now beginning to turn out lumber, and the new saw mill of Underwood & Co., at Springfield, will soon be in operation, and will be capable of furnishing lumber very rapidly. Indications are that there will be more buildings erected in Eugene City next summer than there has been for several years. We understand that Bristow & Co. intend to erect a fire proof brick store as soon as brick can be made in the spring, and other buildings of the same character will doubtless be built during the summer. A better day is dawning for the upper part of the Willamette Valley.—State Journal.

The Boys.—We have daily proofs that the boys are practising their old tricks. [illegible] gus gold dust operators are [illegible] forgery has been committed, and very small petty larceny is prevalent. It looks as if "the boys" will never take warning and quit their ways. Wasco county has been to the expense of sending to the Penitentiary a delegation of forty five or fifty [illegible] great and small, and still they come! There are now at large about fifty rogues of high and low degree, any one of whom is good for a term in State's prison if they return to this country. If the boys will continue to practice rascality in this vicinity, they need not complain if they get a position down below.—Mountaineer.

Fast Line.—The Virginia (Nev.) Enterprise of the 18th November, speaking of the fast time made by the overland stage, says:

In addition to our item of yesterday morning, stating that the Overland Mail stage made the distance between Salt Lake and Austin—400 miles—in 44 hours and 30 minutes, we would state that the Overland Company are prepared to make the time between Atchison, on the Missouri river, through to this city in seven days, if the Government would give them the carrying of the mails at $3,000,000 per year they would agree to make the schedule time between those points. Of course they would have to build stock over the road and carry no passengers. They could however [illegible] ten days and carry passengers. This would not be exactly rail road time, but next door to it.

The Oregonian.—The Weekly Oregonian has entered upon its Sixteenth Volume. It has gradually grown and kept pace with the development of the country, for fifteen years until it is now far in advance of any paper north of Sacramento. Its present publisher, Mr. Pittock, has shown great perseverance in making the paper what it is, for which he deserves and we trust will receive the liberal patronage and support of the people of Oregon.—State [illegible].

Snake River to be Navigated.—A steamer for this purpose is being constructed by a Mr. Dorsey at Old Fort Boise. The lumber for the craft is to be delivered on the ground before December 1st. The machinery is reported on the way from Umatilla. The steamer is to be 212 feet long. It is to run from Olds' Ferry to Salmon Falls, a distance of 150 miles. Everybody in Idaho will crow when this enterprise is successfully completed.—Salt Lake Vedette, Nov. 1st.

Dr. John McCook.—Dr. John McCook, father of Brevet Major General Edward McCook, of Indiana, and Brevet Brigadier General Anson McCook, of Ohio, [illegible] of Major McCook, who was shot and killed by [illegible] in Ohio, in 1863, died at Washington on the [illegible] October. He was the uncle of General [illegible] McCook who was murdered in an ambulance in [illegible] 1862, of [illegible] McCook who died of wounds received [illegible] in Sherman's assault [illegible] Kenesaw Mountain [illegible] at Alexander McCook. At the time of his death Dr. McCook was Assessor of Internal Revenue in the Seventeenth Ohio District, to which position he had just been appointed on the 7th October.

Corvallis, Nov. 18.—Henry Langen, who was arrested in Portland a few weeks since for stealing money belonging to the Stage Company, has had his trial during the week, and was sentenced this morning by Judge Stratton to three years in the State Prison. Also a man named Clark was [illegible] for stealing cattle. The Court [illegible]

Cousins

Oh sadly [illegible] Jack
But that's [illegible] to sing
Sisters will all by the [illegible] Jack
But cousins are a different thing
And you'll [illegible] all that looks and [illegible] Jack
(But let that be a secret between us)
You'll [illegible] all to a [illegible] Jack
For they [illegible] of the sweet [illegible]

The [illegible] Jack [illegible]
When you give her a good night kiss
That [illegible] to a lip
That a thing [illegible] miss
[illegible]
[illegible] the quietest way
[illegible] sleeping a week that night
You'll be dreaming the following day

And the voice of a sister [illegible] Jack
Such tones as the angels [illegible]
But [illegible] cousin's singing to you, Jack
[illegible] for a song [illegible]
[illegible] of them
That [illegible] think the face that gave it
[illegible] while singing National Airs,
Instead of the Psalms of David

And no one thinks it a harm, Jack,
With a cousin to hear you talk,
And no one feels any alarm, Jack,
At a quiet cousinly walk;
But you will very soon find what I happen to know,
That these walks often turn into strolling
And the voices of cousins are sometimes low
Heaven only knows what they've been saying

And then there happens so fun, Jack
Soft pressures of hands and fingers
And [illegible] that we [illegible] fun, Jack
And tones in which memory lingers
That [illegible] the walk is half over the springs
Of your heart are all set into play
By the [illegible] of those fairy soul-stirring things
In not quite the most [illegible] way

[illegible] Jack
Both [illegible] now,
And the sound of her songs is still young, Jack
Though I am no longer so
[illegible] dream of a bower of green
When there is not a leaf on the tree,
But 'twixt walking and talking that cousin has been (God forgive her) the ruin of me

And now, I hate all society, Jack,
And I lead a most anchorite life
For I've loved myself into sobriety, Jack,
And out of the wish for a wife
But oh! if I said half of what I might say,
So sad is the lesson 'twould give
That 'twould keep you from kissing for many a day
And from cousins as long as you live

A Pathetic Little Story

There were three of us—Kate, Annette and myself—we were going into the old wood to hunt strawberries. Oh! it was such a delicious day in June! The birds sang till the air was fairly vocal with their melody, and all the green trees nodded their heads in approbation, the very brooks seemed to have the general inspiration, and danced along through the meadows as if keeping time to the quickstep of the fairies.

Annette Summers and I had been invited to spend the half holiday with our schoolmate, Kate Harrington. Deacon Harrington's old fashioned brown house fronted toward the south, behind it stretched a broad green meadow, and still further back was a densely wooded acclivity, famous for flowers and berries in the geography of every child in Ryefield. I used to love to look at Deacon Harrington's old brown house, even in those early days, when I had not a single notion of artistic skill in my curly head. I knew it combined to an eminent degree the elements of the picturesque. The low roof, which sloped back nearly to the ground was gray with moss. Ivy crept about windows, and over the rustic porch had clambered twining roses, along with heavy clusters of trumpet creepers.

There was a rude seat at the doorway, made of the little boughs of the white birch twisted together in the fantastic fashion, and here Grand mother Harrington was wont to sit, with her gray woolen knitting work. Oh! what a treat we used to think it to spend a half holiday with Kate Harrington.

"I wish I were you, Kate," exclaimed Annette, after we had spent half the long summer afternoon chasing butterflies, and arranging a vegetable baby house with hollyhocks for our ladies' parasols, and tea-pots manufactured out of versatile poppy pods, "I wish I were you, and then I could be happy all day long with nothing to trouble me."

"You could, could you?" and Kate's cheeks flushed as she put away from them her bands of black hair, "you think so, and that's all you know about it. I have a thousand things to vex me. There's Rose, for instance. Mother expects me to be constantly taking care of her, and she's the greatest little torment you ever saw. By the way, girls, let's start after those strawberries in the wood now she is out of sight for a minute, so she won't tease to go with us."

We were half way across the meadow, when we heard a sweet voice, crying—

"Please, sister Kate, Rose wants to go too."

I turned around, I remember, and thought how beautiful was the little creature coming toward us. She was very unlike her sister Kate. Kate was a brunette, but the little white-robed figure tripping across the meadow had a pale, spiritual face, and long curls of golden hair falling to her tiny waist. There was a flush on her cheeks, and a look of eager, beseeching interest in her large blue eyes, and she stretched her dimpled arms towards us, and kept crying in her earnestness—

"Please, girls, wait for Rose."

A look of vexation crossed Kate's face, and she called out in a tone of extreme irritability—

"Go back, Rose, you're too little to come! Go back! go back!"

Kate always had a way of being minded, and the little one put her fingers to her eyes, and silently turned toward the house. We hurried on in the direction of the wood, without giving a single glance backward. I think Kate's conscience reproached her for her selfishness, and I know my own pleasure was spoiled for the afternoon. We found plenty of strawberries, red and ripe, among their beds of leaves; there were little blue-eyed blossoms, too, that kept reminding me of Rosie, and I was not sorry when the sunset shadows lengthened, and we turned to go home.

We had gone down the hill out of the wood, and crossed several rods of the meadow-land, when Kate said, in a hoarse whisper—

"See there, girls, what is that white thing by the brook? Do you see it?"

We saw it and hurried towards it. It was Rose. At first we thought she was dead. Scarcely seemed the faintest breath to steal from her parted lips, and the pulsations of her heart were so weak we could scarcely feel them. She was in a kind of trance-like sleep. It was some time before we succeeded in waking her, and then her limbs seemed chilled and stiffened by the subtle dampness of the meadow-land atmosphere. She could not stand. How many times that afternoon the little darling had begged us to "make a chair" for her with our hands, and we had answered that we couldn't stop. We made one now. She twined her dimpled arms about our necks, and held on very tight, but she didn't speak, except once, and then she only said, "Ain't I most big enough, sister Kate?"

"Mrs Harrington met us at the door, with a wild look of alarm." "Good heavens, Kate!" she exclaimed, "what's the matter with Rose?" And taking her from our arms, she discovered that her clothes were almost saturated with moisture. "Kate, my child, why don't you speak? Has Rose been in the water?"

"No, mama, but she went into the meadow and got asleep, and we found her there sleeping."

* * * * *

Oh! there were anxious hearts in Deacon Harrington's brown house that night. Very tenderly was the suffering little Rose cradled on her mother's breast, but not once did she speak coherently. Her cheeks burned and her eyes sparkled with fever, her dimpled arms were tossed above her head, and every little while, between her moans, she would reach out her hand to some imaginary object, and say—"Please sister Kate, isn't Rose most big enough?"

Three days passed—days of incessant watching and weariness, and towards evening the little Rose opened her blue eyes after a restless slumber. She seemed much better, and the mother glanced hopefully up to the kind physician bending over her.

"I cannot say she's better, madam. I know I wish I could, but Rose must die before midnight." And the tears stood in glittering drops on the good man's cheeks.

The mother's great grief was not noisy. She quietly lifted her darling from the bed, and sat down with her in her arms. Kate stood by, sobbing, as if already the brand of Cain were on her brow.

"Please mamma," said the little one, at length, "am I big enough to go to heaven?"

"Yes, darling," was the tearful answer, "Jesus loves little children."

"And mamma, do you s'pose he'll forgive me for sitting down in the meadow to watch Katie when you told me I mustn't never stay there?"

"Yes, my pet, the good Savior will forgive you for anything if you are only sorry. But [illegible] don't want to go to heaven, and leave mother, does she?"

"I heard somebody say I must go when I was asleep, mother; a beautiful lady, with oh! such bright shining wings, and she stretched out her arms to take me, but I didn't go. I woke up to kiss you and sister once more. Please kiss me, Katie. Little Rose won't never be naughty any more up in heaven, and I'll grow big before you come, Katie, so I can play with you up there."

There were tears, sighs, and a funeral, and a little coffin. The rosebud opened its petals on the bosom of Jesus. The little earth flower was big enough for heaven.

The Dead of Andersonville

A Washington dispatch of Oct 15th gives the following report of Captain J. M. Moore, Assistant Quartermaster, who was sent to Andersonville, Georgia, to mark the graves of Union prisoners for future identification, contains valuable information in which the people are interested, and will doubtless be appreciated by the relatives and friends of those who have given their lives to their country.

Assistant Quartermaster's Office,
Depot of Washington, D. C.,
September [illegible]

To Brevet Major General M. C. Meigs, Quartermaster General U. S. A., Washington, D. C.: In accordance with General Orders No. 19, Quartermaster General's Office, dated June 16, 1865, directing me to proceed to Andersonville, Ga., for the purpose of marking the graves of Union soldiers for future identification and enclosing the cemetery, I have the honor to report as follows: I left Washington on the 8th of July last, with mechanics and materials for the purpose above mentioned. On my arrival at Savannah I ascertained there was no railroad communication with Macon or Andersonville. The distance to Macon being [illegible], and that from Augusta to Atlanta also in the same condition. I endeavored to procure wagon transportation, but was informed by the General commanding the Department of Georgia that a sufficient number of teams could not be had in the State to haul one half of my stores, and as the roads were bad and the distance was more than four hundred miles, I abandoned all idea of attempting a road through a country so difficult and tedious under the [illegible] circumstances. The prospect of reaching Andersonville at this time was by no means favorable, and nearly one week had elapsed since my arrival at Savannah. I had telegraphed to Augusta, Atlanta and Macon almost daily, and received replies that the railroads were not completed. At length, on the morning of the 18th of July the gratifying telegram from Augusta was received announcing the completion of the Augusta and Macon road to Atlanta. I at once determined to procure a boat and proceed to Augusta by the Savannah river. The dispatch boat was secured, and in twenty four hours after the reception of the telegram [illegible] I was on my way with men and material for Augusta. On my arrival there I found the railroad completed to Macon, and that from Macon to Andersonville having never been broken, I experienced little difficulty in reaching my destination, where I arrived July 25th after a tiresome trip occupying six days and nights.

At Macon Major General Wilson detached one company of the Fourth United States Cavalry and one from the One Hundred and Thirty Seventh United States Colored Infantry to assist me. A member of the former was killed on the 6th of August at a station named Montezuma, on the Southwestern Railroad. The rolling stock of all the roads over which I traveled is in a miserable condition, and very seldom a greater rate of speed was obtained than seventeen miles. However, at the different stations along the route the object of the expedition was well known, and not unfrequently men wearing the garb of rebel soldiers would enter the cars and discuss the treatment of our prisoners at Andersonville, all of whom admitted it was shameful and a blot on the reputation of the South that years would not efface. While encamped at Andersonville I was daily visited by men from the surrounding country, and had an opportunity of gleaning their feelings toward the Government, and with hardly an exception found those who had been in the rebel army personally more kindly disposed than those who never took part, and anxious to become citizens of the Government which they fought so hard to destroy.

On the morning of the 26th of July the work of identifying the graves, painting and lettering the head boards, laying out walks and enclosing the cemetery was commenced, and on the evening of August 17th was completed, with the exceptions hereafter mentioned. The dead were found buried in trenches on the site selected by the rebels, about thirty yards from the stockade. The trenches were from two to three feet below the surface, and in several instances the rains had washed away the earth, but a few inches additional earth was, however, thrown in the graves, making them of still greater depth, so close were they buried, without coffin or ordinary clothing to cover their nakedness, that not more than twelve inches were allowed to each man; indeed, the little tablets marking their resting place, measuring hardly ten inches in width, almost touched each other. United States soldiers while prisoners at Andersonville had been detailed to inter their comrades. By a similar stake at the head of each grave which bore a number corresponding with a similar number and a name upon the Andersonville hospital record I was enabled to identify and mark with neat tablets, similar to those in the cemetery at Washington, the number, name, rank, regiment, etc, and date of death of 12,466 graves, there being but 467 which bore the inscription unknown U. S. soldiers. One hundred and twenty thousand feet of pine lumber were used in those tablets alone.

The cemetery contains fifty acres, and has been divided by one main avenue running through the center, and subdivided in blocks and sections in such a manner that with the aid of the record which I am now having copied for the Superintendent, the visitors will experience no difficulty in finding any grave. A force of men is now engaged in laying out walks and clearing the cemetery of stumps preparatory to planting trees and flowers.

I have already commenced the manufactory of brick, and will have a sufficient number by the 1st of October to pave the numerous gutters throughout the cemetery, the clay in the vicinity of the stockade being well adapted for the purpose of brick making. Appropriate inscriptions are placed through the grounds, and I have arranged, as far as my facilities would permit, to transform this wild and unhonored graveyard into a fit place of interment for the nation's gallant dead. At the entrance, the words, "A National Cemetery, Andersonville, Georgia," designate the city of the dead.

On the morning of the 17th of August, at sunrise, the stars and stripes were hoisted in the center of the cemetery, when a national salute was fired and several national songs sung by those present. The men who accompanied me, and to whom I am indebted for the early completion of my mission, worked zealously and faithfully from early in the morning until late at night. Although suffering intensely from the effects of the heat, and unaccustomed as they were to it, one after another was taken sick with the fever incident to the country, and in a brief period my force of mechanics was considerably lessened, obliging me to obtain others from the residents in different parts of the State. All my men, however, recovered, with the exception of Eddy Watts, who died on the 16th of July, of typhoid fever, after a sickness of three weeks. I brought his body back with me and delivered it to his family in this city. Several of the United States cavalry detailed by General Wilson died of the same fever shortly after joining their command at Macon.

Andersonville is situated on the Southwestern railroad, sixty miles from Macon. There is but one house in the place except those erected by the so called Confederate Government as hospitals, officers' quarters and commissary and quartermasters' buildings. It was formerly known as Anderson, but since the [illegible] added [illegible]. The country is covered mostly with pines and hemlocks, and the soil is sandy, sterile and unfit for cultivation, and unlike the section of country but four miles north and south of the place, where the soil is well adapted to agricultural purposes, and cotton as well as corn is extensively raised. It is said to be a most unhealthy part of Georgia, and was probably selected as a depot for prisoners on account of this fact. At mid day the thermometer in the shade reaches frequently 110 degrees, and in the sun the heat is almost unbearable.

The inhabitants of this sparsely settled locality are, with few exceptions, of the poorer class, and [illegible] haggard and sallow faces, [illegible] chills and fever are distinctly visible.

The noted prison pen is [illegible] feet long and [illegible] feet wide, and contains twenty seven acres. The dead line is seventeen feet from the inner stockade, and the sentry boxes are thirty yards apart. The inside stockade is eighteen feet high, the outer one twelve feet high, and the distance between the two is 120 feet. Nothing has been destroyed. As our exhausted comrades left it, it still stands to-day, a monument of rebel inhumanity [illegible].

How men could survive as well as they did in this pen, exposed to the rays of [illegible] sun by day and drenching dews by night, without the slightest covering, is wonderful. The ground is filled with the holes where they had burrowed in the earth [illegible] the weather, and many a poor fellow [illegible] trying to protect himself in this [illegible] way, was smothered to death by the earth falling in upon him.

A very worthy man has been appointed Superintendent of the grounds and cemetery, with instructions to allow no buildings or structures of whatever nature to be destroyed, particularly the stockade surrounding the prison pen. The stories told of the sufferings of our men while prisoners here have been substantiated by hundreds, and the skeptic who visits Andersonville even now and examines the stockade with its cozy sand, cramped and wretched burrows, the dead line and slaughter house, must be a callous observer indeed, if he is not convinced that the miseries depicted of this prison pen are not exaggerations.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,
CHAS. M. MOORE,
Captain and A. Q. M. U. S. A.

Interesting Libel Suits.—Two libel suits brought by Henry B. Dawson against [illegible] are before the Court of Common Pleas in this city. It appears that Dawson, in his introduction to the Federalist, expressed certain opinions, particularly in regard to the [illegible] that [illegible] the views [illegible] Dawson [illegible] made statements concerning [illegible], Hamilton and Jay, which the defendant in this suit [illegible] published a few letters in which he reviewed Dawson's writings with great severity.

Dawson believes the letters unfair and libelous in their character, brought two actions against [illegible] for [illegible] the basis of a suit. In the first case damages were claimed in the sum of $10,000 and in the other case at $50,000. The second action came up before Judge Cardozo yesterday on a demurrer, the counsel for Jay, William M. Evarts and Joseph H. Choate, moving to dismiss the complaint for want of sufficient cause for action. [illegible] Williams and [illegible] Andrews opposed the motion for Dawson. Williams said that the libel was [illegible] the most [illegible] ever heard. If the language meant anything, it meant that Dawson was a traitor, that he was assisting the rebellion, and that he had wilfully falsified history.

Evarts said that next in importance to judicial independence was the freedom of the press and the right of literary and political criticism. The arguments were long and elaborate, and the Judge at the close took the papers and signified his intention of giving a decision at an early day.—N. Y. Evening Post.

How to Teach Cattle Bad Habits.—We are taught to underrate the intelligence of the lower animals under our charge, and yet a moment's reflection should teach every farmer that cows, horses, sheep and pigs are very apt pupils, and most farmers and farmer's boys are quite proficient in teaching them to do mischief. Thus we had many a pole when turning cattle out of pasture, instead of letting down all the bars, leave two or three of the lower rails in their places, and then, by shouting or beating perhaps, force the animals to leap over. This is capital training, the results of which are seen in the after disposition of the animals to try their power of jumping whenever a pole happens to be off, and this accomplished, to set all fences at defiance and make a descent upon the corn or grain field as their inclination, appetite or hunger may prompt them. Another good lesson is to open the gate just a little way, and then, as in the case of the bars, force the cattle forward, and by threats and blows compel them to pass through it. The result of this teaching is shown in the determined spirit manifested by some cattle to make a forcible entry into the stable, yard, fields, or in fact, to molest almost every place where a gate or door may, by accident, be left slightly open.

Apple Jelly.—Cut in quarters six dozen fall pippins, take out the cores, put them in a pan, just cover them with cold water and place them on the fire. Let them boil until the apples become quite soft, when drain them upon a sieve, catching the liquor in a basin, which pass through a clean jelly bag. Then weigh it: one pound of sugar to every pint of liquor. Boil the sugar separately until it is almost a candy, then mix the liquor with it and boil, keeping it skimmed until the jelly falls from the skimmer in thin sheets, then take it from the fire, put it in small jars, and let it stand a day until quite cold, when the paper over and put by till wanted.

The Remedy for Curing

CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS,
Asthma, Croup,

Diseases of the Throat, Bronchitis, Pains and Oppression of the Chest and Lungs, Difficult Breathing and all the Diseases of the Pulmonary Organs.

ITS ACTION IS EXPECTORANT, ALTERATIVE, SUDORIFIC, SEDATIVE, DIAPHORETIC AND DIURETIC, which renders it one of the most valuable [illegible] known for curing diseases of the lungs. It excites expectoration, and causes the lungs to throw off the phlegm or mucus; CHANGES THE SECRETIONS AND PURIFIES THE BLOOD, heals the irritated parts, gives strength to the digestive organs, brings the liver to its proper action, and imparts strength to the whole system. Such is the immediate and satisfactory effect that it is WARRANTED TO BREAK UP THE MOST DISTRESSING COUGH IN A FEW HOURS TIME if not of too long standing. IT IS WARRANTED to give entire satisfaction, even in the MOST CONFIRMED CASES OF CONSUMPTION. IT IS WARRANTED NOT to produce costiveness (which is the case with most remedies) or affect the head, as it contains no opium in any form. IT IS WARRANTED TO BE PERFECTLY HARMLESS to the most delicate child, although it is an active and powerful remedy for restoring the system. THERE IS NO REAL NECESSITY FOR SO MANY DEATHS BY CONSUMPTION when ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will prevent it if only taken in time.
